And it features central Ohio authors Donna MacMeans, Patricia Sargeant, and Marcia James. (Marcia, by the way, gives away a keychain to promote her latest book, At Her Command, and the chain is a tiny pair of handcuffs. Priceless.)" -- 4 Hearts -- Holly Z., Private Passions

"Marcia James's story, Rescue Me, was also very well written. The animal here is a Chinese crested dog. I'm impressed because her story is great, yes, but in a way mostly because she made me like cresties. And... if you've ever seen 'ugliest dog' contest pictures, you'd know why that's surprising. The characters have history, which also helps make this novella more realistic. ...there are some really great stories in Tails of Love and there were good things about each novella. I'm definitely interested in reading more books by some of the authors that I haven't read before, such as Ann Christopher, Marcia James, and Patricia Sargeant." -- The Good, the Bad, & the Unread Reviews

Marcia James's 'Rescue Me' has former pro-football player Adam Baumgardner meeting up with the woman whose heart he broke when he takes a stray to the nearby shelter, which happens to be run by Claire Mendelsohn. ...the book is well worth the money and time, and the authors are all donating some of their proceeds from the book to an animal adoption group, which makes it even better." -- 4 Cupid's Arrows -- Elizabeth Darrach, BellaOnline

"These ten tails showcase the love of significant others whose stories make for fun engaging tales. Readers will appreciate these four legged romances as the stars demonstrate why they are the significant others of their respective pet persons..." -- Harriet Klausner, The Merry Genre Go Round Reviews
